Art Unit: 1773

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on May 20, 2010 has been entered.

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

3. Claims 1-8, 10-11, 13-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Pawliszyn (5691206).

Pawliszyn teaches method and apparatus for extracting analytes from a liquid, such as water (col. 15, lines 15-25). Fluid is flowed through tube 30 by passing into the upper inlet and out of the lower outlet (instant “removing said liquid phase remaining analyte bearing sample) as described (col. 3, lines 31-45; Figure 3). The tube is made of, e.g., fused silica, graphite or polymer (col. 7, lines 43-44) and the interior coated with various adsorbents (col. 7, lines 45-50, 55-56 and col. 4, lines 1-5). Analysis of sample is achieved by inserting the tube into a vessel, contacting the tube with the water therein to extract analytes, removing the tube from the vessel, and inserting the tube into the injection port of a GC for thermal desorption of analytes (col. 4, lines 34-55). It is the examiner’s position that fused silica tubes inherently have smooth walls.

1. Claims 9, 12 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Pawliszyn as applied to claims above, and further in view of Kovar (5882939).

Pawliszyn fails to teach an irregular interior to the tube.

Kovar teaches that sorbent substrates, such as those used in Pawliszyn can be made with roughened surfaces as an alternative to the traditional glass material (bridge col. 2-3).

It would have been obvious to make the tube of Pawliszyn with an irregular (roughened) surface as a known alternative to glass as taught by Kovar. Although Kovar does not teach the purpose of such roughening, one of ordinary skill would understand that roughening may, e.g., enhance adherence of sorbent.

2. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-14 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
